HELPING A VIETNAM VETERAN MAINTAIN FINANCIAL SECURITY

Manny Klosterman,* a Vietnam veteran in his 70s, relied on Social Security and veterans benefits to get by. Mr. Klosterman was able to meet his living expenses, but he had little extra income. When Mr. Klosterman received a notice that his Social Security benefits were to be reduced because he owed back child support, Mr. Klosterman worried he wouldn't have enough money to survive and contacted legal aid for help.

Legal aid discovered that the back child support Mr. Klosterman owed had accumulated years ago, for a child who was now an adult. Although Mr. Klosterman wanted to right the wrong from years ago, he could not afford the payments that the state proposed. Legal aid stepped in and negotiated a monthly payment plan that Mr. Klosterman could manage. With his financial security intact, Mr. Klosterman can continue to afford his bills, including paying his debt, and has peace of mind..
